DOWNING STREET IS UNRUFFLED BY POINCARE REPLY

Allowance Is Made by British for French Temperament-Duel Cannot Continue

Conversations Between Stanley Baldwin and French Prime Minister Are on the Tapis

By HUGH SPENDER

Bu Cable from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Aug. 23-Raymond Poincare's point by point reply to Marquess Curzon's note has made the British Foreign Office lift its brows at the sharpness of the rapier point with which the French Premier thrusts his arguments home. Diplomacy, it is felt, should keep the button on the foil. Since the controversy about the Fashoda affair, the Foreign Office has never received such a sharp riposte. But whatever the British Government really thinks about M. Poincaré's reply, to all outward appearance, Downing Street remains unruffled.

The order of the day is that no great emphasis be laid on the style of M. Poincaré's rejoinder, but that allowance be made for the exuberance of his temperament. But it is felt that this sort of duel cannot go on, and if an answer is sent, it is believed that it will be calm and dignified.

But no decision as to sending a reply has yet been taken, and The Christian Science Monitor representative's information is to the effect that Stanley Baldwin, who returned to London last night, will probably decide against any

Substitute for Chester Plan Offered to Turks

Angora, Aug. 23
THE Minister of National Economy has favorably received an offer from a Turkish limited company submitting a plan for the development of the national resources which would be substituted for the so-called Kennedy-Chester agreement. The project will be

COAL PROFITEERS RECEIVE WARNING FROM FUEL CHIEF

Drastic Action Promised by Mr. Wadleigh-Government Will Fix Price If Necessary

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, Aug. 23-Any attempt to profiteer in bituminous coal prices in the event of another strike in the anthracite industry will meet with prompt action by the Federal Government, working in co-operation with the state authorities and organizations of coal dealers. In making this announcement today, Francis R. Wadleigh, Federal Fuel Distributor, said that it is not contemplated to put into effect a price scale, such as was adopted last year during the strike, until a condition arises that necessitates this action; that is, evidence of profiteering.

The National Coal Association has notified the Government that the bituprice scale, along the lines of the one adopted under direction of Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, in the last fuel emergency.

Price Fixing Hinted

"I see no occasion at present to warrant the fixing of a fair price scale," said Mr. Wadleigh, "but this question will be considered at our meeting in New York on Aug. 28, with governors of New England and North Atlantic States. We are planning to be pre-pared for every emergency that might develop in the event of a strike in the hard coal fields and if prices of

TRADERS IN CUBA FOUND STRICTER THAN POLITICIANS

Loose Laws of Island Called More Effectual Than Severe Regulations Elsewhere

By GARDNER L. HARDING HAVANA, Aug. 17—A Boston business man came to Cuba just after the crash of 1921 to make arrangements with his Cuban customers, most of them totally unknown to him, who were heavily involved in debt to the interests he represented. After he had ound up his affairs and was ready to o home, he made this unsolicited statement to an American official: "Why do not Cubans get more credit for their high standard of personal business morality? The loose laws of this country are weighted in the interest of the debtor, but I can honestly say that the men who take advantage of them are actually fewer than those who succeed in evading the much stricter laws of our own country. Business honor is as high in Cubs as in the United States, and I shall be mighty glad to help my countrymen make its acquaintance.

To fill the other side of the picture I asked one of the most successful Cuban business men of Matanzas how politicians in Cuba have earned the name of being uniformly corrupt.

"Remember one thing," he said,
"that Cuban politics originated in revolution. The boldest man in a gang of daring men became the leader. Corruption and violence were inbred by generations of the Spanish rule. They put a premium on the bravo, on his ignorance, his demagoguery, his contempt' of the state. He rules Cuban institutions today, because constructive men never have had a chance to be heard. They cannot, dare not, oppose the determined cliques in power pecially when, as now, they are one clique which stops at nothing, from the lowest alcalde of a small town to the highest officials at Havana, in maintaining the license of embezzlement which almost universally passes for politics in the Republic of Cuba."

Nation of Promise

Power of Sacrifice

There is plenty of sentimental love and it has produced some very remarkable results, notably among workers of relief in Europe. But the power which does the big things in the world is of a different kind. The spirit which has moved the world's great men was that states readopt the emergency coal distribution act of 1917.

No Action Taken

No action was taken to indicate that the governors are ready yet to declare if the New England states will adon't the railroad consolidation plan submitted by the New England Railroad Committee, of which James J. Storrow of Boston was the joint chairman.

Lincolo once made the great declaration "It is not possible for this nation to remain half slave and half free." It is no more possible for the world to remain half slave and half free, half in chaos and half under the reign of law. Regarding the latter he expressed the belief that, alongside the political jurisdiction of the League should go an economic jurisdiction. "The conception," he declared, "of a League of Nations as a body merely for policing the world is bound to pale more and more before the conception of a cooperation of all the peoples of the earth to gain a livelihood.

League Sentiment Growing

At the present moment, according to Count Kessler, sentiment in favor of the League of Nations and of German membership in it is rapidly gaining ground in Germany. "We believe," he said, "that, if admitted to the League we should receive membership is he seem whould receive membership is he seem whould receive membership.

There has been a great deal of talk in France and elsewhere about an autonomous state within the German Republic as a sort of buffer between France and German Rhine state would be to France unless it were under French control; that is to say, inless it amounted to nothing but sugar-coated annexation. A sort of permanent control of the Rhine-land by France would lead, not to permanent wares and almost certainly to another war.

A new German state cannot by the new vierman Constitution be formed against the will of the people concerned, which must be ascertained by a direct vote, in perfect freedom. A new Rhine state could not be formed constitutionally so long as the Rhinelands are occupied, the occupation making a free vote of the people of the Rhineland impossible. Until, therefore, the French and Relgians declare their willingness to evacuate the Rhinelands, the whole question is, by the German-Constitution itself, removed from the realm of practical politics.

Economic League of Nations

ler said:

The economic ideas behind German democracy pave the way to international organization. It is thus easy to conceive what must have seemed the chief defect in the League of Nations to Germans when the Covenant was first published. Its lack of economic ideas, its want of real substance, is greatly owing to its lack of economic functions. The conception of a League of Nations as a body merely for policing the world is bound to pale more and more before the conception of a cooperation of all the peoples of the earth to gain a livelihood.

We see the centralizing tendency of modern economic life in the growth of great trusts, in the centralization of finance, in the extension of labor unions in Europe beyond national frontiers. Here are great forces in formation with which it should certainly become possible to counterbalance the "eccentric tendencies,"

It became apparent very early in the game that the political ideals of England and France were very different, and coming back to its favorite theory of the game that the political ideals of England and France were very different, and coming back to its favorite theory combalance of power. France preferred to use methods of force. From the very start of the life of the Versailles Treaty we can witness the gradual development of the different international troubles. First came the trouble with the Turks, the English ascendency in Constantinople and the Greek mandate; second, came the Russian trouble, and again there was a great divergence of views between England and France, England starting transactions with the Bolshevist Government. And France wanting its debt and refusing to deal with Moscow; third, came the clash in Poland, where the French were building up a buffer state that seemed to collapse in the summer of 1921; next came the question of reparations, and last the return of the Turk to Europe, flushed with victory, having humiliated the great powers, especially England. These, of course, are sufficient reasons to create that dominant feeling of profound anxiety for the future of Europe in peace that is so noticeable to any traveler in Europe.

SOFT COAL DEMAND

West Virginia Mine Price of many by-products that are wasted when coal is used in the raw state, the Bureau of Mines report control of the state of the -Supply Plentiful

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Aug. 23 (Special)—So far, the unsettled state of trial situation in the coal industry, TAKE ON WELSH COAL affairs in the anthracite coal districts the Bureau of Mines is showing the great alarm on the part of the industrial or domestic coal consumers in the middle west. While a quickening of demand for domestic sizes of bituto move the coal from Swansea or minous coal is noted and prices reflect Cardiff. The Belgian steamer Remier, that condition, it is probable that the bringing about 5000 tons for the Metapproach of September has as much to that condition, it is probable that the do with the increased domestic move-High-grade West Virginia bituminous lump is selling at the mines at $3 to $3.50 net ton, with egg size around the $2.50 and nut at $2 to $2.25.

Industrial consumers are buying a Bedford and Boston within the next little more freely than this time a month ago, but prices are only slightly firmer, there being no urgent demand. Mine run coal still hovers around $1.75, with nut and slack at $1.25, or even less in many instances of "distress" or inferior coal:

This indifference on the part of the coal consumer was discussed at today's meeting of the Huntington Coal Exchange. It was pointed out that there should be no real reason for agitation. The bituminous miners, especially the non-union districts, are prepared to arise to the emergency, if the consumer will accept anthracite substitutes, which he was not inclined to do during the last strike.

There was a time during the winter of 1922, when New York City was crying for coal, that thousands and the sands of tons of very high grade bituminous egg and lump coal making a tour of the world for the on hand at the piers at Newport News purpose of learning at first hand what and could be taken to New York in a persons outside of England think of few days—but New York could not be persuaded to use a substitute for an-

'Large industrial plants, who failed to contract as is customary in April of this year, are now entering into contracts for their requirements to next April, and in some cases over 12 months on the assumption that prices have reached a low level.

The non-union fields of West Virginia and Kentucky, which in the past was checked by an uproar at Port have always met low-priced market conditions by wage cuts, have so far yelled down by an audience of 5000 been loath to trim their labor costs. This, it seems, is impracticable because their labor can find ready employment in other industries and because union agitation is active and ready to take advantage of any discontent which wage cuts might cause. Federal Bureau Shows Its Value Following Tests

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, Aug. 23-Can byproduct coke, obtained from bituminous coal, be produced in sufficient cite in the case of a strike next winter? Tests recently conducted by the Bureau of Mines for the purpose of developing a substitute domestic fuel indicate that it can be, and a report published by the bureau urges the more general use of coke for domestic heating in view of threatened disturbance in anthracite production. "By-product coke is a good substi-tute for anthracite," it is stated. "As it is made from bituminous coal, and the bituminous coal beds are very ex-tensive, it seems possible eventually to

The use of coke instead of hituminous coal to take the place of anthracite is also of economic value to the country because it enables the saving tinues. At a time when thousands of householders are pondering the prob lem of next winter's fuel supply and keeping an anxious eye on the indus-

Officials point out that 80 per cent of the people in the United States use bituminous coal for household purposes, most of the other 20 per cent being in New England and North Attomed to using anthracite. The counbelieved to be in a much better try is condition to meet a strike in the anthracite mines than it was to meet the emergency of a strike in unionized fields in both hard and soft coal fields last year.

Shipments of bituminous coal to New England by rail from Jan. 1 to Aug. 11, 1923, totaled 122,710 cars, compared with 55,981 in the corresponding period of 1922 and 100,348 in the like period of 1921. Each car carries approximately 50 tons of coal, making 6.135,000 tons during this pe riod in 1923, compared with 2,799,056 in 1922, and 5,017,400 in 1921.

Shipments by tidewater also have been running far ahead of last year. The shipments to this territory for the first seven months of this amounted to 7,267,292 tons, compared with 5,846,718 tons in the correspond ing period of 1922, and 3,881,378 in

It was made plain by John Hays Hammond, chairman of the United States Coal Commission, that the Government does not intend to make any more moves toward bringing about an agreement between the anthracite operators and miners, unless they take the initiative among themselves.

He indicated that it was likely the commission would not issue its "emer- and to sales realization is that the gency report," giving the facts about the present dispute and fixing the blame for a failure to agree until next closed down, the open operations in week, as it was still hoped the parties southern West Virginia (on the in controversy would settle their difin controversy would settle their dif-Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad) and in ferences and not allow another strike to take place on Sept. 1, as now only about three days a week, due to threatened.

That the Administration has reached the limit of its toleration to both sides in the perennial struggle between operators and miners was plain to be seen here. This is not considered the time to engage in threats to operators and miners, but to prepare for meeting the emergency that will confront the country in the event the disputants disregard public opinion, it is pointed

Add to this the fact the old Spanish law is still in voked, by which a person bringing suit against a public official for misdemeanor in office must show personal injury therefrom, or else he has no injury therefrom, or else he has no legal existence in court, and the all of the island, if extended. It is not difficult for anyone to see that if the 180 graft is revealed.

Likewise there can be found hardly the shadow of a free press on this island. On the Prado, at Havana, stand the empty offices and rusting presses of La Nacion, which are verred to have been closed, as two like those of other papers in the presadministration, for opposing the Government. The American cannot believe that such enterprising papers as are to be found in Havana, with otogravure sections and lively sport pages are openly venal, but every Cuban knows and admits it. There is corruption within corruption. Reporters work for $15 a week in many cases, for nothing in some, and pick up the rest in tips. Blackmailing is prevalent. Honest men and brilliant journalists write for the newspapers, but they still face the unpleasant situation of decent men trying to enter politics. An expert eye, knowing where to look, may get the truth in the Cuban press, but it will hardly be found in any one paper. This is the more pitiable, since everybody here reads the papers, and they could be, especially in their in-imitable satire—a distinct Cuban gift an immense instrument for good.

Compromise Between Cuban Sugar and Railroad Interests Said to Be Nearly Reached

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23—Cuban railway interests, headed by Col. José M. Tarafa, sponsor of the so-called Tarafa bill for the consolidation of the railways of Cuba, today were understood to be in a fair way to reach a compromise with American and Cuban sugar interests whereby the objectionable features of the Tarafa bill would be withdrawn and the pressure upon the Cuban Government rom the American State Department thus removed.

Conferences between the opposing interests which were conducted yesterday in New York had for their object the modification of the Tarafa bill to such an extent that no confiscation of property would be involved and that the so-called private ports, which had been threatened with closure under the original terms of the bill, should be allowed to remain open.

With these guarantees it is under-stood that the sugar interests would be willing to signify to Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of State, that they no longer oppose the consolidation measure and the warring interests would thus reach an amicable settle-

Colonel Tarafa, who saw Mr. Hughes on Tuesday afternoon, is in New York, where it is understood he was in conference with representatives of the opposing interests. At the statement department it was admitted that Colonel Tarafa had discussed the proposed measure at some length, but officials declined to comment in detail on the results of the conference. While there apparently was little doubt as to the objectionable features of the Tarafa bill, it was admitted by its foes that the measure had certain strong points. The consolidation of the roads, it was argued would not only insure more efficient service, improved rolling stock, and a reduction of overhead expenses, but uld also correct certain defects of the Cuban Government, were in reality paid by the sugar companies and were consequently much more susceptible to outside influence. As a matter of fact, numerous cases of the smuggling been traced to the maladministration

These sugar companies own all of the land surrounding the sub-port, and of course no sort of community or town or village can grow up there. These sub-ports are private ports and have been permitted from time to time, sometimes by decree and sometimes without decree, but unquestionably contrary to law, since 1890. They have developed to such an extent that they

Cuba will have no public wealth, and if every time she should attempt to impose a small tax upon the sugar industry, which will now have absorbed the entire island, the sugar industry runs to the American Government and cries out "configentian".

As a means to this end attention here tends to focus upon the conference which the British Prime Minister, Stanfacturing in the British sentiment when it describes the present moment as the "golden opportunity" for the two peoples to "get together."

The feature of the bill which is being criticized, and the only feature which is really being considered by the State Department, to wit, the so-called confiscatory feature, is the tax upon the 47 existing private or sub-ports of the character already described, which roughly speaking would yield about roughly speaking would yield abou $900,000 annually to the Government of Cuba on an exportation of something like 8,000,000 bags of sugar.

The plan of action would then be separate reply to Germany, accepting the suggestion of a commission of experts to examine Germany's capacty to pay, in which America will be asked to join.

It is said that the commission could report in a month and Great Britain could then announce what it considered a reasonable sum, and ask France if it would reconsider its position and consent to evacuate the Ruhr district in return for other guarantees of payment and the hope of a definite sum. Such a plan would only be adopted with great reluctance, for it is realized that France holds a strong hand in the Ruhr, but Mr. Baldwin would not for that reason refuse to make a decisive effort to bring France to reason. It is not possible to see the result of such action but the British Premier, at any rate, is de-termined to do what he considers right, even if the diehards should strongly oppose him.

British Comment Restrained British comment on the French reparations note continues restrained. friendliness of M. Poincaré's tone and the fact that he makes no real move toward lessening the points of difference with England are the main features selected for comment in the press here today. There is a con-sensus of opinion, nevertheless, that Poincaré's outspokenness has eleared the political atmosphere, and shown both countries how disastrous to their common interests would be any break in the Entente.

The Daily Express, which declares "that the only alternative to a quar-rel with France is for the British Government to register its claims and retire from Europe," and the Westminster Gazette, which asks, "Is a break coming?" are almost alone in failing to see a hopeful outlook.

France puts its own payments in a second place

Inquiry Flatly Refused

France makes its own demands de-pend on the allied demands. Since what is wanted is clear, it is useless to have an inquiry into Germany's capacity to pay. This is flatly re-fused. Since England has always contemplated the Ruhr occupation, Raynd Poincaré flatly refuses to submit the legality of the action to a tribunal. The essential difference between France and England at the present oment is whether constraint is to be

Dr. Gustav Stresemann to Reply French Premier's Recent Speech

By Special Cable

BERLIN, Aug. 23 (Staff Correspondence)—Dr. Gustav Stresemann, the Chancellor, received the party a fund of foreign exchange. Discussing the inner political situation in Germany, Dr. Stresemann said: Government realizes that it is at last constitutional cabinet. If it fails, chaos would be the result. The Government, therefore, will not hesitate to adopt drastic measures to save

Today Dr. Stresemann is to speak efore the executive committee of the Reichstag on the foreign political sit-uation. It is believed that he will make use of this opportunity to reply to M. considered to him from his ancestors, Gifford Pinchot, Governor of Pennsylvania, the man who is making the Keystone State one of the best governed in the country, said to me:

"I love the work that I am doing here. I am never happier than when I am doing work that seems to me to be constructive. I am only bored and dissatisfied when I have nothing to do, although as a young man I used to think that it would be the acme of bliss when I had reached my time of life to, come here and loaf and have nothing to do but enjoy the scenery."

I quote this remark first because I think it gives the key to the success he is making as the Chief Executive of the State of Pennsylvania.

The Legislature in its last session adopted a new code for the State which has revolutionized the administrative functions of the Government. "Before that code was adopted," said Governor Pinchot, "we had 102 distinct administrative offices with very little co-ordination between them and with independent responsibility. Now we have pendent responsibility. Now we have 18 departments and three commissions to carry on all the administrative functions and three elective officials responsible to the people.

Carrying Out Promises

"It is under this new plan that I am trying to reorganize the Government so as to carry out my promise to the electorate not to spend one dollar beyoud the estimated tax revenue of the State and to operate with the precision and efficiency of a well-organized cor-porate industry. I am carrying out that promise. Pennsylvania for the that promise. Pennsylvania for the first time in many years is running within its income."

"Oh, that's far too advanced for Pennsylvania." said Governor Pinchot. cannot get such a law enacted here yet. We are regrading the entire civil list, however, so as to give the same pay for the same grade of work in all departments. We have had to weed out a great many undesirables, establish regular hours of work and generally increase the competency of the force in nearly every branch of the state government."

Proud of Constabulary

Governor Pinchot is proud of the Pennsylvania state constabulary. It is with that force largely that he is coping with the problem of prohibition enforcement. "You will not find a finer or better officered body of men in the whole country," he said, proudly. He does not take special redit to himself for the smartness take police force: he said that nection with the forthcoming pression. of the state police force; he said that he found them as they are when he dential campaign. the same political ground. Governor Pinchot is one of them and especially is he bound to the Roosevelt tradition by reason of his having been a promi-nent member of the Colonel's "tennis cabinet." But the Governor is not complacent with the idea of being a presidential candidate. He said:

I have no political aspirations beyond my present job. I want to fulfill my promises to the people of Pennsylvania. I am in no sense a presidential candidate. The test of the new code will come when the Legislature meets again in 1925, when it can make or unmake it with the appropriation bills. My sale with the appropriation bills. My sole ambition is to leave a heritage when I step down from my present office of an efficiency in administration that will make such an impress upon the people of Pennsylvania that it will be impossible in the future to retrograde into the slipshod extravagant methods that have heretofore prevalled. One full term in the office of Governor is a short enough time to accomplish that short enough time to accomplish that without interrupting it to conduct a presidential campaign.

Nevertheless, there is this much to be said about Gifford Pinchot's chances for the presidency. The reorganiza-tion of the Republican Party in Pennsylvania that has been going on during the last two years has placed many ardent admirers of his in control of the party machinery. It would not be surprising if the Pennsylvania delegates to the Republican national convention next June would carry instructions to vote for his nomination. whether he desires it or not. That delegation will be an important factor in the convention, and stranger things have happened than the nomination of Gifford Pinchot as the Republican candidate for President in 1924. Personally, however, I am convinced that he will not turn his hand over to get it.

IRELAND LIKELY TO HAVE COALITION

Forecasts of Election Results Seem to Agree Upon Nature of the New Government

By Cable from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Aug. 23-The British public s watching with growing interest the general election contest now proceed-ing intensively on the other side of the Irish Sea. This contest, as the Man-chester Guardian today points out, presents just those features which caus the friends and enemies of the proporthe friends and enemies of the propor-tional representation system, under which it is being conducted, to feel respectively satisfaction and alarm. No less than 377 candidates, representing 14 separate political groups, are competing for only 150 seats, while 1,800,000 voters have been enrolled, which is 400,000 more than were upon last year's register, and in at least one constituency—that of Waterford City—the women voters outnumber the men.

Programs on Main Issues Forecasts of the ultimate results ary in everything except the anticipation, which seems general, that some coalition or other that supports the constitution on which the present Irish Free State has been founded will emerge with a majority in the new Dail. Programs on two of the main issues have appeared today. One of these is put forward as the "seven lamps of patriotism" by Dublin business candidates who stand for economy and declare, with the Irish Inde-pendent, that the Free State must be put upon a sound financial basis, and that there will be the most urgent need for a retrenchment "axe" when the Dail reassembles.

The other is that of the De Valeracial)-A movement has been started ites, as voiced by the republicans in Donegal, who plump for complete Irish independence and draw a lively licture of what they intend to do it if they get it. Their proposals in-clude dismissal of the Governor-General, replacement of the Free State Army by the militia, the cutting down political relations with all friendly

It would be unsafe to conclude that this happy state of things will continue though, as the Times Dublin corre spondent rightly points out, the Irish people since the signing of the Anglo-Irish Treaty, have undoubtedly gained an enormous amount of political ex-perience and a sense of responsibility which was foreign to the national temperament in the old days of agitators.

This is par-ticularly noticeable in the stitching manufacturers and union officials state.

The cutting departments are running at capacity and to fill the demand for cutters a number of men from out of town have been employed. The shortage of warpers has decreased the output somewhat. No Haverhill shoe factory employees are out of work, excepting in cases where delay in other departments has held up pro-duction on their parts of work.

Now I will tell you how I got my pig and raised it. The banker at the East Las Vegas Saving Bank would lend money at a low rate of interest for six months or a year to any one who wanted to be a pig raiser and join the club. So I borrowed the money from the bank and bought my pig. Our neighbor, Mr. Hicks, brought the pig home for me in a trailer behind his "jitney." I had to let her run with my father's pigs because he said, "If you keep a pig peuned up she will eat more and soon learn to eat chickens." He was right. Then my troubles began, because in our club work we are required to keep a daily record of what our pigs eat. I told our county club leader the situation I was in. He said "The best thing I know is to find what all the pigs eat, then divide it by the number of pigs in the herd." I believe nothing has happened in this country in a long time that more thoroughly fastens boys and girls with the farm and thus prepares for competent leadership than the club work that is being so successfully conducted.

It is when we achieve success that we are most happy. It is impossible for anyone to like a business in which he cannot be successful, and when boys or girls succeed through their own or girls succeed through their own effort in doing something worth while.

NIZHNI-NOVGOROD, July 31 (Special Correspondence)—Granting re-bates of from 10 to 50 per cent on all goods sent either by rail or by water, the Soviet Government is aiding the Nizhni-Novgorod fair this year to its utmost. Private traders enjoy the same privileges as state or co-operative organizations. The various Russian banks are advancing credits. The number of repaired and rebuilt warehouses has more than doubled, as compared with last year, in anticipation of larger stocks of goods.

The co-operatives are playing a large part in the fair and in the general life of the Nizhni Province. They have leased a whole street in the fair grounds for the display of their wares. One of their most picturesque exhibits consists of kustar work, the quaintly colored wooden dishes and spoons and peasants carve during the long Russian winter nights.

The co-operatives furnish the peasants with the materials needed for this work on a credit basis, taking their share of payment after the ar-ticle is sold. The co-operatives also run a river fleet on the Volga, consisting of 11 ships and 74 barges They undertake to supply their members with lumber, and they dabble in all sorts of business.

The Nizhni-Novgorod fair is considered important for its effect in developing the Russian internal market and in strengthening the connection between Russian industrial centers and outlying Asiatic countries of the federation, on the one hand, and the neighboring independent Oriental countries, such as Persia and Turkey, on the other. The turnover at the fair is estimated at about 100,000,000 gold rubles, or $50,000.000

The head of the Nizhni co-operatives. Mr. Kostin gives the impression of being much milder and more tolerant than many of the revolutionists whom one finds in high positions in Russia today. "The time for fighting is over," he said, in the course of a conversation. 'I feel that it is a mistake to let the bitter feelings of the civil war become permanent. I am in favor of letting everyone who is honestly willing for Russia's future co-operate in the work of Government and industry to the limit of his ability.'

LONDON, Aug. 14 (Special Corre- T. C. Lowry, Cambridge............. 161 spondence)-From the appended list, compiled especially for The Christian teams of 10 men each.

Conditions were far from favorable for good shooting yesterday and, considering this fact, some very satisfactory scores were made. Team H of the United States Marine Corps won the Chief event of the day—the Pfaff match—with a total of 558 points, Team J being a close second only two points behind. The shooting was at 200 and 300 yards rapid-fire and 600 slow fire.

Teams were made up of four men each and 22 took part in the match. Dawson's 159 (for Eton vs. Harrow), M. D. Lyon's 120 (for The Gentlemen vs. The Players). T. F. Shepherd's 126 (for The Players vs. The Gentlemen), C. H. Taylor's 109 (for Oxford vs. Cambridge University), and P. H. Stewart-Brown's 102 not out (for Harrow vs. Eton), derived particular significance from the fact that they were made in the "classic" engagements of the year; but the vast majority were, of course, scored in county championship games. It will be observed that A. G. Dipper's 252 not out for Gloucestershire vs. amorgan, remained undisturbed the highest innings of the season. Eight other men could claim the distinction of having attained to, or passed, the double century, while E. H. Hendren, the Mid-dlesex "star," had no fewer than nine three-figure scores as the outcome of remarkable consistency. The list: Batter and Club

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass., Aug. 23 (Special)—The feature match in the women's invitation tennis singles tournament of the Longwood Cricket Club being held here in conjunction with the United States doubles championship tournaments was the one between Mrs. R. The Brooklyn girl showed splendid ground-covering ability in the first two sets by taking three games in the first and then winning the second, 7—5, the last and deciding game being taken at love. Her exertions proved too much, however, and Mrs. Clayton easily won the third and deciding set with the loss of only one game.

Only one match was scheduled for the semifinal round of the men's doubles championship tournament this afternoon; but it was expected to be the feature of the tournament and the winner of it was generally picked to take the championship title on Saturday when the final is played. Hawkes, the Australian doubles team which is to try to win that event in the coming challenge round of the Davis Cup competition of 1923, were the contestants.

Williams and Washburn, the only American pair left in the tourney, had an easy time qualifying for the semifinal round yesterday as they met G. P. Gardner Jr. and H. C. Johnson of Boston and won in straight sets, 6—0, 6—3, 1—3. It was nothing more than a good practice match for the winners.

and 1920. It must be admitted that the former champlons were not at the top of their game as Johnston could not seem to get his strokes working in championship form and Griffin did not show the class of tennis he displayed in the years he was helping to win the title. Then, too, they did not team together as well as would be expected from two players who had been in partnership as long as they have. Oftentimes, the Australians scored placements by driving the ball between the two Californians. Of the Australians Hawkes did the most effective work and he was the target for Johnston and Griffin during the entire match.

Manuel Alonso of Spain and W. F. Johnson of Philadelphia furnished the most spectacular and interesting match of the third round. They met 1. D. McInnes and R. E. Schlesinger, the two substitutes on the Australian Davis Cup team and while the match was not regarded as of "Grandstand Court" quality it being staged on an outside court, it soon attracted a big gallery.

It was characterized by some fast and spectacular stroking by Alonso and brilliant chop-stroking and gretting ability by Johnson. The Spanish-American team finally won the match, but it took five hard-fought sets to bring them the verdict 4-6, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5, 7-5. When the Australians had safely tucked away the first two sets, it looked as if they would easily win and when they ran up a lead of 4-1 in the third set, there was not a spectatuour in the hird set, there was not as spectatuour in the hird set, there was not as spectatuour stroking by Alonso and Johnson win and yet they did. interest, enabled speculators to bring about a rather sharp recession in prices during the morning. Oils were again the weakest feature because of the unsettled condition of that industry, but a number of representative shares, including Baldwin, Studebaker, American Can. Crucible Steel, Corn Products, and Famous Players, yielded I to 1½ points. Call money opened, at 5 per cent. Unusual activity and strength in the Eries, all of which reached their highest prices of the year, at advances of 1½ to 2 points, was attended by rumors of competitive buying. This outburst of strength imparted a better tone to the balance of the list, Gulf States Steel, Mack Truck, Loose-Wiles, Kayser, and Public Service of New Jersey fising 1 to 2 points.

At present California is producing 875,000 barrels of oil a day, the highest total yet reached. Production has steadily increased, despite the fact that the various fields are shut in anywhere from 40 per cent to 90 per cent.

Allowing for the shut-in production in the Los Angeles basin, it is estimated

IMPROVEMENT

Operating Results Encouraging
—Freight Moving More

Efficient

The Boston & Maine road has been making steady improvement in its operating results, cutting down cars on the system, increasing freight car miles per day and bringing per dem charges within more reasonable bounds. Cars on the system on Aug. 14 were down to 31,577, whereas the average for June was 35,923, for May 39,298, for April 41,079 and for March, which represented the peak, 41,538. Of course, the high figures in the earlier months of the year were the cumulative result of unfavorable weather and the aftermath of the shop strike of 1922 which led to embargoes and inefficient movement of cars. The decline which has since taken place is in part a seasonal development, but it also is the result of persistent effort.

Car Movement Better

The total number of cars on the system of the preferred and common stocks were subjected to an assessment of $8.50 a share. Interest

Bad Order Cars Less

Boston & Maine has been making steady progress in repair of bad order freight cars and these are now substanfreight cars and these are now substantially below what they were when the shop strike began. The number of bad order cars in June was only 3512, the lowest for the year to that date, and comparing with 5153 in July, 1922. In January of that year the number was as high as 5943, so that it has now been cut more than 40 per cent.

The following tabulation shows the reduction in cars on the system, the increase in freight car miles per car day

STEEL SENTIMENT

Improvement in Buying Sends Up

Sentiment in investment and specu-lative circles has turned more optimistic regarding steel stocks, although new steel business is still considerably below production.

The four months' slack in buying was not particularly harmful to steel companies. They had sufficient back-log to justify a high rate of operations throughout the dull period and were able to maintain prices. If the improvement in buying continues, as trade authorities are sanguine it will, steel manufacturers will be able to rean large.

MUCH DEPENDS ON EXTENT OF AUTUMN TRADE

Moody's Weekly Review of Financial Moody's Weekly Review of Financial Conditions says:

A vital question now is the extent of the autumn trade. If this seasonal business proves as good as usual, commodity prices should recover, railroad earnings break records, margins of profit improve, and every industry show new life. In the autumn trade, hownew life In the autumn trade, how ever, the buying of manufactures and merchandise by the interior and the rural districts is as important as the harvesting and selling of farm products. Much depends, then, upon the profits of the farmer.

The current impression that the world's international trade is going from bad to worse appears erroneous. It is true that the 1923 trade balances of most foreign satisfaces of most foreign nations show only mod-erate improvement over 1922; but either the net balances or else the gross exports do as a rule show this moderate improvement. It is our own net balance that has become adverse. Com-paring 1922 with 1920 it is found that the foreign trade position of almost every nation has greatly improved. Thus the world's business is slowly reviving in spite of the disastrous and world-wide failure of statesmanship.

To America this means a betterment in the quality of our foreign investments; a slow but continual growth in those of our products wherein the United States is the natural source; and an ultimate return to something like the prewar conditions in foreign trade. By this is meant that export business is likely to remain highly competitive, and that foreign markets, which appeal to us merely because Europe's gates are closed, may now be regarded as permanently lost in most instances.

manufacturers will be able to reap large profits in last half of the year.

A significant factor is the revival in demand for railroad material, particularly rails, which are being purchased for 1924 delivery. Railroad buying has been dormant for months. It was railroad buying that gave the initial impetus to the active steel market that started early in 1922.

July earnings of most steel companies were somewhat smaller than June, but all dividend-paying concerns more than earned dividends for the month.

Indications are that August will be a better month than July in earnings, although it is impossible to judge at present to what extent the change from long to short shift in furnace operations will affect profits.

The following figures represent earnings a share on the common of a number of steel companies in the first half of 1923, with closing prices Tuesday and recent lows:

POSSIBILITY OF LONG-TERM LOAN BY GOVERNMENT

for Treasury Certificates

tincates on Sept. 15 bankers are beginning to discuss the possibility of another long-term refunding loan similar to that of last October. Although this amount is small as Government finances go in this generation, it is too large to be taken care of out of third-quarter income tax payments. Accordingly some refunding operation is practically certain and the only question is finances go in this generation, it is too large to be taken care of out of third-quarter income tax payments. offered.
With the exception of the Treasury 4½s offered last October all the refunding carried out by the Treasury since the war has been by means of Treasury certificates maturing in one year or ess, or Treasury notes maturing in five years or less. By his previous opera-tions Andrew J. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, has pretty well spread the maturity of the Government's obligations over the next five years so that they can be comfortably handled as a routine matter by further refunding with notes or gradually refunded into long-term bonds. Doubtless the Treasury would like to get as large a proportion as possible of the national debt into the

as possible of the national debt into the form of long-term bonds.

It seems unlikely, nevertheless, that a long-term issue will be offered in the present instance. The Treasury cannot present instance. The Treasury cannot under the war loan acts sell bonds bearing a rate higher than 4½ per cent. although the interest rate on notes maturing in five years or less is not restricted. One issue of outstanding notes bears the high rate of 5½ per cent. With all the 4½ per cent Liberty issues and the Treasury 4½ offered last fall selling under par it is difficult to see how the Treasury could expect to sell 4½ per cent bonds at this time. It is possible, of course, that it may make the issue attractive in other ways than it the rate. For example, a 50-year bond with a noncallable provision might be with a noncallable provision might be

SWISS PASSING THROUGH CRISIS

with all security markets in a state of Metal and Watch Industries Hard Hit-Foreign Capital Flows Outward

BERNE. (By mail)-Figures give striking proof of the crisis through which Switzerland is steering its way. Whereas between 1911 and 1918 the number of factories subject to factory laws increased 19.6 per cent, between 1918 and 1922 it fell to 13.5 per cent. In the metal trade, which has been most unfavorably affected. 314 firms have disappeared in the last five years, in the watch and jewelry trade 249, in food 126, in machinery and instruments 119. All cantons save three have shared in the loss and 10 report industrial conditions worse than 1911. There is a fall of 20 per cent in the factory personnel for the entire country, the personnel for the entire country, the total being below 1911.

The watch industry has suffered the biggest reduction in personnel, 40.8 percent, while the proportion of female hands employed has risen from 39 to 42 per cent, indicating men have been sacrificed to a greater extent than women, because of higher wages.

Financial Change

Concurrently with the industrial has ome a financial change. In 1920 imports exceeded exports by nearly 1,000, 00,000 francs. Figures for the first ROAD'S PROGRESS events accentuated the tendency-the revival of Austria under the League of Nations plan and the panic produced by the threat of a Swiss capital levy. The last alone is said to have been re-sponsible for the transfer of about 200,-000,000 to London, Amsterdam, and elsewhere. Switzerland rapidly lost its title as a refuge of capital.

Loses Foreign Capital

The very fact that it had become such a refuge, however, produced results which in time were bound to send the capital out again. In 1921 and 1922 excess of gold and silver imports over exports was $70,000,000. There was a plethora of money. The bank rate fell to 3 per cent and the market rate as low as 1½ per cent. So long as it was only a question of safety the money remained there, but with the capital levy threat arriving in Switzerland when it had disappeared elsewhere, depositors were quick to seek better returns for their money, outside the Federation. Consequently on July 14 the National Bank raised its rate to 4 per cent, with immediate good results for the exchange. That the preceding weakness was due to other causes than gold cover of the currency is shown by the 70 per cent reserve, while the legal minim per cent. It is hoped that the recovery of the Swiss franc may be in time to avert a general rise in the cost of liv-ing and that there will be no need to export gold or to contract a short loan abroad in order to assist the exchanges There is some complaining that the bank did not act earlier, but is was argued that a slight depreciation of the currency might help the country to de velop its exports.

The next day, Jamie's nurse took him down to the harbor, and there was Captain Curry waiting for him. A very large sailing ship was tied to one of the wharves. Sailors were painting the sides, so Jamie knew this must be the Lucy Lee.

These schools are often in a rundown and impoverished condition. At one place it had been impossible to find an adequate water supply. Several wells were dug; dams were created, with almost no results. Once a day the engineer pumped, and at that time the cook had the children draw class of farm life. Sevout tubsful of water; the employees would hurry with pitchers and pails to lay in a supply to last them until pumping time again. It is needless to say that laundry work could not be done in the right way, to say nothing of keeping the building in a sanitary condition. After years of testings, a water supply was finally found, but it was unfit for drinking purposes.

At another school there was plenty of water, but it was shut off most of the time in winter, for the building was poorly heated, and the pipes would burst. The engineer was a spe-cial friend of the superintendent's, and he felt that his position was not dependent on his efficiency, he was slack in keeping up his work. Often he slept until almost breakfast time, and did not turn the water on until late in the morning. The disciplinarian had a barrel of water put outside the door, and if the boys cared enough for their appearance to desire a wash for their appearance to desire a wash to break the ice, if it were in a breakable condition, and take a cold plunge.

There are many sides from which to time project. view these untoward conditions. The tion for the school may be limited.

There is a great deal of "red tape" in this department of governmental work, just as there is in other departments. For instance, boys' clothing is sent in by lots. There may be no overalls that will fit the smallest hoys, so the matron has to put tucks in them or fix them up in any way she can. Visitors seeing such misfits may surmise that somebody is at fault, either through carelessness or through lack of taste. Such articles of clothing may be purchased in "open market," if the superintendent is fortunate enough to be allowed such a privilege. During my stay at one school three different superintendents were in charge. The first one was an elderly man, and I understood he was asked o resign. He was not allowed to buy in open market, and for months the school had been without sugar. His

INDIA IS ENDEAVORING

TO RELIEVE DISTRESS spondence)-Strong feeling has been aroused among the Eurasian community at the nature of the official reply to questions put in the Legislative Assembly in which the Government maintained that it had no information as to severe distress among the members of that community domiciled in the country who had been demobilized after military service, or on account of wholesale dismissals from the railways in pursuance of the policy of Indianization These replies do not harmonize with the admission made by the Viceroy and other high officials to Colonel Gidney, parliamentary leader of the Eurasian community. Many Europeans and Eurasians who have been dismissed from the railways have received written statements saying that they were being replaced by Indians. One high railway official wrote to Colonel Gidney saying that they were unable on the score of economy to employ Anglo-Indians. The Government refuses to publish the correspondence with the railways, from which it is not unnaturally inferred that they are Indianizing the railways at the expense of other sections of the community. They also decline the suggestion to form an Anglo-Indian regiment, on the ground that it would involve the disbandment of an existing Indian regiment of the

As a palliative for the distress, Colonel Gidney suggests the acceptance of schemes for assisted emigra-tion to the colonies. Colonel Dunlop, vice-chairman of the Ex-Services As-sociation, has offered from 50,000 to 100,000 rupees to assist a properly conducted scheme. It has also been proposed to form agricultural colonies suitable areas in India, such as the Sukkur Barrage, the Sarda Canal and the Sutlej Valley.

TIMBER EMBARGO CONSIDERED TIMBER EMBARGO CONSIDERED TORONTO. July 24 (Special Correspondence)—Owing to the heavy export of hardwood logs to the United States, it is possible that an embargo may be placed. In the district of Algoma alone, in northern Ontario, 200 townships contain an estimated total of 6,000,000,000 feet of hardwood. One American contract is for 50,000,000 feet of hardwood logs, to be renewed later for an equal amount. It is pointed out that the logs are being exported in preference to the establishment of mills in Ontario, which might give employment to thousands of men.

By MARJORIE SHULER AFTERNOON with the child Artists of Vienna—that's an adventure worth having. What is back of the work with which these boys and girls are startling Europe?

How much of a guiding hand is reached forth by their teacher, Professions Circle? Are the metices and pursor Cizek? Are the motives and pur-poses of their unusual work his or

It is easy enough to find out in present-day Vienna. No traffic blocks the feway down the Graben. The sidewalks are practically deserted as one rounds the corner and comes up against the great stone building where the State has assigned space to Professor Cizek for his experiment. Up and up the stone steps—elevators are rarely in use in Vienna these days. And finally the great bare studio. The door is wide open. There are no bars to entrance, especially when one has as a guide one of the best-known writers of children's stories in Austria, Frau Helene Scheu-Riesz, whose books are almost entirely illustrated by this very group of child-artists. The adventure has begun.

Certainly there is freedom of choice for the youthful workers. In the back of the room are several girls ben ling over weaving frames. A boy is cutting out droll wooden figures. Half a dozen boys and girls are workging at drawing boards. There is free-idom, but freedom with a seriousness and an industry which show the possi-bilities inherent in youth, not for the breaking away from responsibility, but

As simple as the room itself are the costumes of the children. Clean, ordinary garments, but with patches and darns eloquent of present-day conditions in Vienna. The drawings on which the children are working, the amusing little wooden figures, a like their clothes, are representative merry-go-round in its gayety and abanof conditions. For the most part they show the distribution of food, or clothing, the presentation of a toy to a child, all the various longings of the young artists tumbling from their finger tips as they wield pencil or brush. But there is humor also, humor in the drawings, humor in the absurd little wooden toys which are brightly colored and carefully knowledge of what this opportunity

Professor Cizek himself, tall, commanding, a slight stoop in his broad city, from families which had great shoulders, is going up and down the fortunes before the war, from families aisles between the desks, offering which have known generations of recommendations in an offhand fashion, advising, but never directing. the essence of symbolism.

Mr. Armfield's poems are full of such transmutations; full, especially of concrete images for abstract ideas. His aspirations and imaginings become white horses and unicorns. Sometimes his symbols are easy to interpret; sometimes not so easy; but where they are obscure it is to be remembered that this little book is but the first part of a trilogy, which, when complete, will doubtless be the full and intelligible expression of a consistent envisage-ment of life. Meanwhile, in this first member of the trilogy there is much incidental beauty and strains of true

+ + + "Dismembered Hungary," by Ladislaus Buday. (London: Grant Richards. Price 6s. net.)

This book is interesting, not so much for its contents, which cover already well-worn ground, but on account of the premises on which its argument is based and the introduction by Lord Newton.

The book is an endeavor to excite sympathy toward the restitution of Hungary to its former boundaries. Lord Newton uses the argument that Hungary was unduly punished for its participation in the war by stripping it of its territories, and that this punishment should now be remitted. It is only necessary to remember that Hungary was not "punished" in this sense, but that its territories themselves whose inhabitants had for long selves, whose inhabitants had for long groaned under the harsh Magyar yoke, took advantage of Hungary's defeat to proclaim their freedom. Lord New-ton's argument therefore resolves itself into the reactionary doctrine

It will be interesting to see if the coming season offers another play which, as far as pure technical build of scene and act is concerned, will surpass this one. midst of a family given to speaking their thoughts. When something is to be said, it is said at that moment, instead of being held over for the "big scene in the next act." This is so unusual and refreshing that it gives the theater-goer the impression that Mr. Flavin is a constant spendthrift of good dramatic material that he may need later on, but which he never really does need.

The story concerns a mother who loves so selfishly that she wrecks three lives. Her idea of love is founded on absorption, domination, restric-tion and control of the objects of ner affection. Her own self-will is her only law. When aroused in what she thinks is her love for her husband, her son and her daughter, she runs blindly amuck, and lays about her with devastating fury, and with the inevitable result that she accomplishes only the opposite of her desires. match, with disastrous results. The theme is not a pleasant one; facts are not always pleasant to face. But the play is a powerful object-lesson. One of the characters voices the moral to be drawn: "Mind your own business.

In the acting Beatrice Terry carries off first honors for her remarkably true portrayal of the part of the mother, an entirely different mother than the one she played in "Mary the Third," and more exacting. In her acting there is such keen understanding that it is a delight to watch her even in an unsympathetic rôle. Henrietta Crosman is welcomed back to the New York stage in the part of the grandmother and gives a charming performance, reminding us occasionally of Mrs. Fiske. Paul Gordon, who in private life is Thomas Achelis, and was for several years prominent in dramatics at Yale University, has now come into his own as a finished pro-fessional actor. Much of the artistic rendition of this play is due to the delicate understanding of Miss Terry and Mr. Gordon. Florence Johns, as the girl in the case, gives a thoroughly good performance, as do Grant Stew-art, Albert Perry, Whitford Kane and Harold Winston

The Trade-Secret of the Poets

OW are poems made? The critics and scholars have been striving time out of mind to discover and to tell us, with no very impressive results. The poets themselves, with no very impressive results. The poets themselves, with their dark talk about the Muses, Parnassus, and the Pierian Spring, have have dust dawn modulate with murmurs of the helped us much, and one is nearly may strain had been talked and written on the subject, once penned an elaborate ac-count of the way he had made "The Raven," trying to make it appear that the thing was done as unfeelingly as one would assemble the parts of an automobile. The result of this effort was that no one believed him, and it is now rather generally agreed that his alleged analysis of his own composition is at least as imaginative and remote from fact as the poem with which it purports to deal. 4 4

Perhaps it is best to conclude that poets do not often know how their poems are made. Prose, we might say, is manufactured in the small spot of sunshine in which we live our daily lives, but poetry is made in the wide surrounding shadows, and it is hard to say, even for those who dwell among those shadows most habitually, what goes on there. All that the poet can say is that his best lines come from he knows not where. He does not make them. He looks and they are there. It is the poor lines, which have to be fabricated in the sunshine, that cost him the labor. These he can tell us all about. It is better that he should be chosen, as it were, by the lines he writes than that he should consciously choose them; far better that he remain a passive instrument than that he should thrust himself forward as an active agent. Something deeper an active agent. Something deeper and more pervasive than he knows is striving, if he be really a poet, for utterance through him, and with this something the little artifices of conscious contrivance can only interfere.

+ + + This mood of passive acceptance on the poet's part has been recognized for ages and has been variously typified in the myths and legends dealing with poetic inspiration. No modern poet has been more successful in suggesting the proper attitude than Shelley was in the use he made of his favorite metaphor of the æolian harp. A very fitting and beautiful image, this, of the poet's patient waiting for some mysterious and unseen visitant, for a breath out of the shadow to stir his thoughts to ecstasy. All that he could do himself was to reduce what was given him to order and harmony

EDITORIALS

It is not easy for a public man or a newspaper, or, for that matter, for the individual citizen, to express

The Annual Coal Controversy

an entirely temperate and unbiased opinion upon the situation existing in the anthracite coal industry in the United States. To the general public this annual quarrel between the operators and miners, with the threat or an actual calling of a strike, the resultant scarcity of hard coal, and the increase in its price which results in either case, is a recurrent night-mare. Industry and private comfort alike encounter every year this threat to their peaceful continuance. Up to the present time official methods of averting this yearly catastrophe have been futile. A careful student, writing for The Christian Science Monitor at the time of the last struggle, referred to the conditions in the coal industry as "anarchic." The expression is none too strong. Until governments learn how to deal with anarchism they will not be able to grapple effectively with the struggle over the control of the coal which man did not put into the earth, but for the extraction of which he levies a burdensome tax upon those to whom it should justly belong.

It seems inevitable that the conference at Atlantic City between the miners and the operators over the wage scale for next year is about to fail. The Federal Coal Commission recognizes the impending failure by announcing that it is preparing to fix the responsibility for it. Fixing the responsibility will be but a sorry remedy to present to the people who will have in the coming winter the choice between going cold, paying extortionate rates for anthracite, or seeing the community in which they live enveloped in the pall of smoke that proceeds from a general use of bituminous coal. The President himself seems to anticipate nothing more than a failure of the parties in controversy to agree, for he has called a meeting of the governors of interested states, in New York next week, for the purpose of seeking a remedy. It is greatly to be hoped that out of this conference something more may come than the suggestion that the Nation use bituminous coal, or that citizens spend several hundred dollars each for the purpose of equipping their coalburning furnaces for the consumption of oil-thereby delivering themselves over into the control of another

The Monitor would not underestimate in the slightest degree the measure of right to be found in the position taken by each of the parties to the coal controversy, nor the difficulties which confront any disinterested third party, official or otherwise, desiring to compose these differences in accordance with exact justice. Among our contemporaries there is an evident inclination to denounce Mr. Lewis, the head of the United Mine Workers, for a certain autocratic attitude and a violence of language. Perhaps the criticism is well founded. A man who has fought his way to the head of the miners' organization, and has himself handled pick and drill underground, is not as a rule well equipped with the smoother phrases of

There is an inclination to condemn the miners because they refuse to submit their case to arbitration. This criticism may have in it more of justice, though it is plain that the strategy of the situation leads the operators to harp upon the unwillingness of the miners to arbitrate in order to divert attention from their own insistence upon the rate of wages upon which they have determined. According to the Coal Commission, that rate varies from $1500 to $2000 a year. That is based upon the wages enforced by President Wilson's commission in 1920, and was a gain of 50 per cent a ton for each ton mined over the wages which prevailed in 1913. But according to accepted statistics, the purchasing power of a dollar today as against that in 1913 is 65 cents. So estimated, the wages of the miners do not seem exactly to offer assurance of comfort for a family and any saving against the "rainy day."

The operators insist that any increase in this wage would necessitate an increase in the price of anthracite, and they claim that the public would never stand for such an increase. The long-suffering public usually stands for what is forced upon it. But the report of the Coal Commission, which stated the wage of miners at the figures above quoted, also showed enormous increase in the net earnings of the coal companies since 1913, with no commensurate increase in production. Apparently, therefore, the old question as to the comparative sanctity of dividends and the worth of human labor is the one on which the conference is deadlocked. One phase of the controversy, insistence upon which by the miners has antagonized public sentiment wherever this factor is understood, is their insistence on what is called the "check-off." This is the demand of the union leaders that from the pay envelope of every miner shall be deducted the amount of the union dues and assessments. Under it no man can be employed by an operator who is not a union member or without having his wages docked for his obligations to the union. This, it seems to us, is an intolerable demand. We question its legality, but believe that even should its technical correspondence with legal requirements be affirmed, it is a distinct violation of every fundamental doctrine of liberty, and creates a discrimination against that labor which would hold itself free from union control that cannot be defended. The miners, of course, offer as a defense to this "checkoff" that employing corporations deduct house rent and bills at the company's store, where such are maintained, from the pay envelope. But the parallel does not appear to be exact, and in any event the company's store is an abuse which many states have undertaken to destroy by legislation.

The program, therefore, which will be presented to the governors at their conference, next week, is one that may well test the greatest human capacity for composing seemingly irreconcilable elements. It is not made easier by the fact that the commodity affected exists in only one state in the Union. The governors, other than Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, can have nothing to say as to production, and are interested only in consumption. The federal Government has authority only as the commodity involved is the subject of interstate commerce, and Governor Pinchot, radical and devoted to the public welfare as he is, finds his hands tied by legislative enactments forced through the lawmaking body of the State of Pennsylvania a number of years ago by the power of the miners' unions.

We have no doubt that all that human intelligence and earnestness can do will be done in New York next week. But while it is cold comfort for present consumers, we are confident that the solution of the anthracite problem will only be found ultimately in the discovery of means of utilizing substitutes for that type of coal which will do away with the present objections to such substitutes. The various methods recently described as "burning coal twice," and with one of which Mr. Ford is experimenting on a large scale, offer some promise. The endeavors being made to devise a way of burning coal underground instead of laboriously mining and shipping it to the point of consumption may yet be crowned with success. Probably after the lapse of years the monopolistic owners of anthracite and the monopolistic controllers of labor engaged in extracting it will find that they have destroyed their industry. In the meantime the public suffers.

News from Germany indicates the purpose of the Stresemann Administration to take strong, even dicta-

Time for World-Wide Co-operation torial, measures for the stabilizing of the currency and the maintenance of order. For the moment it appears that distinctly doffiestic concerns are to be given precedence over the wrangle with France in the Ruhr. Doubtless that is properly the immediate duty of the German Government. But Berlin, and its new ruler, are so much the center of interest today that the world hopes he may prove a man of vision, one who will at least strive wisely to enlighten those millions whom he is to lead. It is the belief of some who know Germany that there is soil—soil which will bear abundant fruit if it is but cultivated wisely—in which to sow the seeds of international comity and international cooperation.

Facts are facts; but when facts are concealed, anything is liable to be accepted in their place. During the war, and since, no one nation has been wholly right—all have made mistakes. Some, however, have erred more than others. Those nations which have erred least, whose motives are highest and best, are surely in a position now to take a leading part in righting the ship of European politics, which at present shows a list to an almost dangerous degree.

The moment has perhaps passed for discussing in detail the pros and cons of the Ruhr occupation and what brought it about. The cry of Germany that it "cannot pay" its just debts has been heard too often. The reason why it may perhaps be more or less true at the present moment is, however, not frequently given in language too clearly defined. As Browning wrote in "Abt Vogler," "tis we musicians know," so certain financial groups might say today "'tis we financiers know."

The onlooker who wants to see more of the game asks, "Where are Germany's millions?" "How, and at whose instigation have they left the country, as is being so often stated?" The answer is there, and certain citizens of the German Reich must be in a position to supply it. Suppose the disappearance of Germany's millions is due to methods not wholly "straight"; suppose more erroneous methods to avoid paying just debts have been resorted to than most people know anything about. What good, at this moment, to "rake them out"? Truth has a habit of coming to the surface. History will, in due course, reveal irrefutable facts. Of that there is no doubt whatever.

The question at this critical moment in the history of the world is: "What is the remedy, and how is it to be applied?" France may be said to be in possession of the Ruhr. Great Britain, some say, is in strong opposition to France's attitude, through fear of the unemployment problem at home. Some people in Great Britain have never quite agreed with France's action, which has been summed up in these words: "France is doing the right thing in the wrong way."

Let us be willing to attribute to Great Britain higher motives than merely a desire to ease a local problem, even though it is so serious a one as unemployment. Nevertheless, on the question of the Ruhr, an impassable gulf seems to be fixed between the policy which Stanley Baldwin advocates and that for which M. Po'ncaré stands sponsor.

It is well known that "unity is strength," and it is equally true that the better the motive, the higher the aims, the greater the strength. The United States and Great Britain are one-one in origin, parentage, language and customs. Let that oneness be more clearly expressed politically. The motives of both great English-speaking countries are the noblest. Statesmen, and even lesser lights, on both shores of the Atlantic have emphasized this patent fact. They have even said that, as soon as the two countries stand openly side by side, the peace of the world will be assured. In Great Britain, as in the United States, the fact is frequently emphasized that the complete political co-operation of these two countries will do more to awaken international co-operation and lessen international distrust than any other political combination could accomplish.

Americans are continually expressing the fervent desire that the intelligent co-operation of their Nation in world affairs may be no longer delayed. Whether the majority recognize it or not, the stabilization of the politics, finance, and commerce of the world depends upon exactly this active co-operation. What could withstand it? The American doughboys landed in France at a critical moment, were brigaded with the British troops, and helped to "win the war." One who may have been a father of one of those doughboys said, recently, during an interesting conversation on international politics: "It seems to me the real war is just about beginning." The answer given was that just as the United States helped to win the great military struggle, so it can, and eventually will, throw its full weight into the scale of justice, and help win that "real war" which "is just about beginning."

There should be no dispute over the amount of water to which the sanitary district of Chicago is entitled from ocean, form a very beautiful and delicately adjusted water system. They serve a great population, in many cities and towns on both sides of the international boundary line. Probably nowhere else in the world is the flow of water-borne traffic concentrated in such volume.

'Chicago is one of the largest ports on the system. No city is more concerned than Chicago with the importance of maintaining the water levels for navigation from the head of the lakes to the ocean. When the middle west's vision of a deep waterway is realized, to open the paths of commerce for ocean liners through to the upper lakes, any attempt to divert water from the great inland system's natural course will be as keenly scrutinized in Chicago as it is in ports like Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Toronto, and Montreal.

Under present conditions, an excessive diversion of water from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi River would tend to lower the water levels in ports and canals east of Sault Ste. Marie that depend upon the Great Lakes system. Some engineers assert that it would cause the level to fall even in Montreal harbor, where millions of dollars have been spent in recent years to deepen the port for ocean liners. The annual run-off from the lakes to the ocean has been measured. During the spring floods, more water flows down than is needed, either for power development or navigation. But by the time autumn arrives the flow is reduced considerably, sometimes to barely sufficient to maintain the canal locks at the required depth for lake navigation.

It is stated that the Chicago sanitary district is prepared to construct regulating works, one in the Niagara River below Buffalo, and another at the Galops rapids in the St. Lawrence River below Ogdensburg. Perhaps the sanitary district's hydraulic engineers would be able to satisfy the port of Montreal that this proposed regulating scheme, to allow an increased diversion at Chicago, would not decrease the flow of water through Montreal harbor. But it is obviously a question for international agreement. Happily, too, there is a splendid tribunal in existence—the International Joint Commission, composed of United States and Canadian citizens-with more than ten years of experience in dealing with just such questions. Chicago's share of the Great Lakes, and how the sanitary district is to secure more, if desirable, can be equitably determined by the International Joint Commission.

Editorial Notes

IF IT was a demonstrated fact that so-called health campaigns really do improve the well-being of the communities in which they are conducted, the proposed awarding of prizes by the American Public Health Association to the city of 100,000 or more population which showed the most nearly adequate community health service by January, 1924, and the most progress thereafter, would be everywhere whole-heartedly approved. It is quite generally recognized, however, that there are two views on this question, to put it very mildly, for many believe that such drives actually do far more harm than good. The constant harping upon health measures and hygienic procedures, in their opinion, results in the production of the very conditions which they are designed to combat. From this standpoint—and in any matter such as this. one individual's opinion is entitled to as much consideration as another's-certainly no plan involving the expenditure of large sums of money for questionable purposes should be allowed to carry without the fullest public discussion.

Denver, Colo., is to be congratulated on the way in which it is dealing with violators of the liquor law. A recent Associated Press report, under date of Aug. 1, read as follows:

Mrs. Katherine O'Conner, a Denver society woman, pleaded guilty in the United States District Court here this afternoon to the illegal possession of liquor and illegal transportation, a fine of $400 being paid by her attorney. Earlier in the day John R. Walsh had entered a plea of guilty of illegal possession of liquor and conspiracy to violate the liquor law, and was fined $500. Last week Father Grace was sentenced to two years in Leavenworth for forging liquor permits.

The attention of a number of other cities is respectfully called to this praiseworthy example.

Doubtless there are other papers with sentiments like those of the Morgan County Democrat of McConnelsville, O., but without equal courage to express them. In commenting on the Monitor's analysis of the space devoted by the press of the country to a prize fight in comparison with the San Francisco educational conferences, it said:

This paper has never played up the sensational and has managed to exist without it. If it ever comes to the place when it cannot follow such a policy, we'll quit the business.

Internationalism and Agriculture

By V. M. PARKER

I.-WHY WORLD AGRICULTURE?

THE conscience of America which finally responded to the World War is at last being awakened to a responsibility for World Peace. There is an increasing recognition of the necessity for some kind of co-operation between nations. If world peace is essential to the well-being of the United States, then are not world politics our concern? Scores of voices are demanding that the American people acquaint themselves with world facts and related responsibilities.

Distinguished speakers at Williamstown have urged America to come back into the council chamber of the nations. Their appeal may be summed up in the words of Philip Henry Kerr (secretary to Mr. Lloyd George at Versailles), who said last summer in his lecture on "Prevention of War":

Whoever thinks this is an easy task let him begin in good earnest to discuss it as the Institute at Williamstown is doing in the open conference on "Problems of Raw Materials and Foodstuffs in the Commercial Policies of Nations," led by William S. Culbertson, vice-chairman of the Tariff Commission, Washington, D. C. This discussion, carried on by men who know the facts and those who want to learn them, is a hopeful step toward the formation of an effective international public opinion on these fundamental world questions.

This brings us to the particular brand of internationalism which it is our purpose at this moment to discuss—Internationalism and Agriculture. The following answer to the question of our title is found in an editorial in the journal, World Agriculture [Vol. 1, No. 2, p. 8]:

Because agriculture is the indispensable foundation of individual and national existence and because three-fourths of the world's population are engaged in it and in the industries directly dependent upon it, no subject has greater importance in the establishment and maintenance of world peace. Competition for control of the means of subsistence, the ruling motive of the past, reached its inevitable culmination in the Great War, with incalculable destruction of the very things contended for. Co-operation in the use of the earth's resources is the alternative for this destructive competition, and until the peoples of the world realize this and set themselves resolutely to the task of bringing about actual and practical co-operation, chaos and a return to savagery stare us in the face.

In the increasing demand for co-operation among nations, we need to be reminded of the fact that there has existed for nearly eighteen years a League of Nations on the basis of agriculture and that the man responsible for this was an American citizen, a merchant and farmer of California-David Lubin. We have a timely reminder of this fact in the recent life of Lubin. Signora Agresti's extremely wide experience with world affairs in their relation to agriculture as well as her connection with the International Institute at Rome as secretary for fourteen years to David Lubin, make her consideration of present problems in world organization from an agricultural basis most valuable. She has exerted her influence in the United States to link more effectively its Government and its agricultural organizations to the Institute at Rome. At a meeting for this purpose held on June 25 in the office of Secretary Wallace at Washington, Mrs. Charlotte B. Ware of Boston (who has forwarded this work in the United States since Signora Agresti's return to Rome) was made secretary of a committee of five, of which Dr. A. W. Gilbert, Commissioner of Agriculture for Massachusetts, is chairman efforts to forward the work of the institute founded by an American citizen should be followed and aided, not only by American farmers, but by all who are convinced of the present need for practical international co-operation.

To show the inter-relationship of agriculture with the basic interests of society, David Lubin used the argument of the economic tripod: "He was fond," says Signora Agresti, "of illustrating this by placing his three fingers on the table. "These two front fingers,' he said, 'represent city industry and city finance, the third finger behind these represents the farm. When these two front fingers grow strong, as they do by combination, they bear back heavily on the third, and as this third finger all alone grows proportionately weaker it cannot uphold the extra pressure. What happens? All three go down, and with them the superstructure of society.' David Lubin foresaw some such economic crash unless the condition of the agriculturist was proportionately strengthened and bettered. His plea before the King of Italy was not a sentimental plea for the farmer as a class—but a plea for all classes."

Since the price of the staples of agriculture is a world price, determined by world conditions, there should be a world organization of the agricultural interests as well as of the interests of commerce, finance, and labor. So Lubin believed. The manner in which he convinced a king of this, so that Victor Emmanuel of Italy sponsored the founding of the International Institute of Agriculture in 1905, is too vividly told in Signora Agresti's book for us to devitalize it by retelling here.

The purpose of this institute was to render impossible the harmful price fluctuations in staple food crops due to rumor or willful misrepresentations. This could only be accomplished by the concerted action of all the nations concerned. Cropreporting in the United States had reached a high degree of efficiency; but in other large exporting countries (as in Russia when it entered the institute) there was no data upon which to base accurate reports. It took a special visit to the Russian authorities in Petrograd on the part of Lubin to remedy this. The inertia, prejudice and suspicion which balked Lubin's efforts remind us of the difficulties that face the effective development of internationalism today. Moreover, his ideal for the institute at Rome was not merely a crop-reporting organ or world bureau of research. The International Institute of Agriculture has a permanent committee, with "permanent delegates" from each adhering country to keep it in direct touch with their governments at home. It has also an assembly, meeting at stated intervals, to act as the means of keeping the permanent committee in contact with the "living agricultural forces of each country, provided"-here came the rubprovided the farmers of the world woke up to the importance of the institute and brought the necessary pressure to bear on their home governments." On the realization of this latter half of David Lubin's idea hang the hopes of future enlargement of world influence for the International Institute at
